

Unleashing Your Inner Kid at Pinstack

Posted on March 30, 2015 by eatstyledallas

We all have the urge to unleash the inner kid and blow off some steam during the week. Whether it's putting on your favorite pair of pajamas and singing around the house, shoving a mouth full of candy into your chomper in a sitting or just having some downright fun times. Well, if the third option is your go to, I've got some exciting news for you. I recently went in to Pinstack, unique dining and entertainment destination, laced up my bowling shoes and ate all the snacks. The huge complex houses a 28-lane bowling alley as well as a two-level laser tag arena, a rock climbing wall and a high-ropes course suspended 20 feet above 100 of the newest video games and simulator technology. Do I have your attention?

I know what you're thinking. You've been to all the bowling alleys that are smokey, draining and downright gross. My friends, I think you will have a change of mind when you visit Pinstack. Besides being super clean and friendly, Pinstack offers a modern, attractive and forward aesthetic with bold finishes, creating a one-of-a-kind experience. We bowled our way through the afternoon and even saved room for a couple of the menu highlights like the Honey Bee Pizza (Italian Sausage, Prosciutto and Honey), Wings and delish brisket sliders. Yeah, I guess you could said my inner kid is satisfied for a while but that won't keep my from coming back again very soon.
